VOL. LIX: No. 36. REDWOOD CITY, CALIFORNIA SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1918 ESTABLISHED 1859

CITY TRUSTEES ASK REMOVAL OF LIQUOR SIGNS

At the council meeting Monday night the question of removing all old liquor signs from buildings was discussed. In view of the fact that Redwood City is dry, the council thought it proper that all evidences of dampness be removed and accordingly instructed City Clerk W. A. Price and Chief of Police J. P. Coleman to instruct the property owners to remove all such signs.

A communication was received from Mrs. M. E. Scott, who lives on Davis street, requesting a sewer extension on Roosevelt avenue to connect with her home.

The board placed the matter in the hands of City Attorney Mansfield, to take up with the property owners in the district, a proposition, with a view of having the sewer installed by private contract, rather than by the city through the regular channels. The latter, the city attorney explained, would be much more costly to the property owners.

An application for a permit to conduct a freight and transfer business in Redwood City while en route between San Francisco and San Jose, was received from the San Francisco and San Jose Transportation company. The hearing was set for Monday, December 16.

Upon application of M. E. Ryan, a permit to hold a 3 o'clock dance in the Foresters hall on December 14 was granted the fire department.

Following a report of Street Superintendent Dearborn that there were a number of houses in the Eastern addition in the vicinity of Stambaugh and Laurel streets that were without proper sewer connections, the board after discussing the matter, instructed the city attorney and city engineer to prepare the necessary proceedings for the extension of the sewer mains on Stambaugh street so as to accommodate the occupants of the above homes.

The monthly report of Chief of Police James P. Coleman showed collections for November, as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Sale of Junk | $ 15.00 |
| Water | 2343.35 |
| Taxes | 14,826.11 |
| Water connections | 105.10 |
| Sewer connections | 12.50 |
| Sale specifications | 5.00 |
| Birth & Death Certificates | 4.50 |
| Rent of fire house | 2.00 |
| Street Imp. Dist. No. 13 | 1,347.45 |
| Street Imp. Dist. No. 14 | 151.28 |
| Total | $18,812.29 |

The report of City Treasurer F. K. Towne showed a balance in the general fund of $19,894.05 on December 1st and $5,877.71 in the water fund.

After allowing the regular monthly claims the trustees adjourned to next Monday night, December 9th, when they will meet to select a new chief of the fire department.

Constable M. H. Walsh received a telegram from the war department at Washington on Wednesday stating that his son, Harry Walsh, had been wounded in France, and that the nature of the wound was undetermined. He received his injuries on September 26. Some time ago the parents of the young man received a letter from him saying that he was in a hospital but would soon be out. He did not mention the fact that he was wounded. He no doubt was sparing the feelings of his parents as they would be alarmed if they learned he was injured. Young Walsh went with a San Mateo contingent to Camp Lewis the first of the year. After a brief time in training he went to France. He participated in the engagements in the Meuse and Argonne with the 91st division. It is believed that he is severely wounded. Mr Walsh has been at the front since last July and most of the time engaged in battle. His parents are anxiously awaiting a letter from him.

ALEXANDER GOMEZ TELLS OF WOUNDS

The following letter was received by Mrs. John Kearse from her grandson, Alex. Gomez, who is now with the A. E. forces in France:

Somewhere in France, November 7, 1918.—My Dearest Grandma: Although I have not heard from any of you for three months or more, I thought I might write to you now, but before you receive this, I guess you will see by the papers that I have been wounded. So I will tell you about it, so you won't worry, dear Grandma. I am now in the hospital with two bullet wounds, one in my head and the other in my left arm, but dear folks, do not worry, as I am getting along nicely at present though suffering much pain. I was shot on the morning of November 1st and we were indeed lucky to get out alive. My buddy and I were lying in a shell-hole about 30 yards from a house on No Mans' Land. There was one machine gun upstairs in the house and one on the ground.

About 4 o'clock in the morning the troops opened up a barrage on the enemy. It lit up the sky so that the two machine gunners could plainly see us, but we could not see them. They at once opened fire on us, but could not hit us, for we sure did hang close to that ground. When they saw they could not hit us, they threw hand bombs in our hole, so we decided then and there that if they could not get us would go after them. I was first up and first down, for I was no sooner up than I was struck on the head. We thought we would take another chance and then we went right after them. Just then I was shot in the left arm. My gun dropped to the ground but I grabbed my pistol and fired it until empty. I could not reload as my arm was useless and by this time I could not stand.

What is the news over there about this war? Very little news over here, only what we get off the Huns, and we never believe them, but I do not see how it can last much longer for we are sure going after them now. I am very anxious to near from home and how you all are. It sure makes one feel very badly when the mail comes and we all stand around waiting for our name to be called, and there is none for us, while some boys get half a dozen each. I know you have all written, and suppose I will get them altogether. With my best love to you all, dear Grandma, and remembrance to all my friends and hoping to be with you soon. Your loving grandson,

ALEX. F. GOMEZ.

On Wednesday Mrs. Kearse received an official telegram from Washington, advising her that Alexander Gomez had been severely wounded in action on November 1st.

REDWOOD CITY'S FIRST DEATH IN THE GREAT WAR

Corporal James Lindsay Wilson is the first Redwood City young man to die of wounds in action. He died of wounds received in the battle of the Argonne Forest on September 26. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wilson, received a letter some time ago from their son in which he stated that he was injured. Young Wilson left here for Camp Lewis with the first San Mateo contingent that departed on September 19, 1917. He remained at Lewis until last July when he went to the front. His chum, Wilbur Doxsee, who is in France, met him last September as he was going to the front. The young men were surprised in meeting each other in that far off country. His friend bid the young hero a last farewell as he marched forward to make the supreme sacrifice for his country.

Lindsay Wilson attended the high school here for a while and later entered the local postoffice. At the time of his entering the army he was employed by Balfour, Gutherie and Co., of San Francisco. He is survived by his parents and two sisters, both married. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson visited friends here on Wednesday. They have been residing at Oakland for some time but had hoped to move back to Redwood when their son returned from the war.

ALIEN ENEMY PROPERTY

Seizures and Sales May Continue Nothwithstanding Armistice.

While it is impossible at present to state just what will be the final disposition of the property, amounting to approximately one billion dollars, located in this country and belonging to alien enemies, it seems apparent that the armistice will not check, for the present at least, the seizure and sale of such property wherever found by the enemy alien property custodian. Although the actual fighting between the armies of the allies and those of the central powers has stopped in Europe, the war against the enemies' insidious industrial fortifications in this country is still going on and seems likely to continue until this danger is completely destroyed.

COAL RESTRICTIONS REMOVED

The Federal Fuel Administration has begun the removal of war-time restrictions on the use of coal, having authorized the use of all lights, except when generated from domestic sizes of anthracite coal, during the United War Work Campaign, in order to facilitate the work of raising the $170,000,000 needed. There has also been a discontinuance of the curtailment of coal consumption for the production of brick, cement, lime, hollow tile and lumber for building purposes. This action is in harmony with that of the War Industries Board in removing the ban on a considerable number of non-war commodities, including almost al kinds of construction and building material.

PLUCKY LITTLE BELGIUM ASSERTS HER RIGHTS

Not Satisfied with Return to Pre-War Condition; Wants Status Fixed as Absolutely Independent.

In a recent official statement the Belgian legation at Washington announces that it will no longer be satisfied with a "Guaranteed neutrality" but desire "complete independence." This little country, which has suffered so terribly from the war and to which the world owes so much because of its gallant and successful efforts to delay the Hun hosts in their first mad westward rush for the conquest of the world, is fully justified in feeling that it is entitled to complete political, economical and military independence without any sort of neutralization such as fettered its freedom before the war. Such status would entirely free Belgium from any foreign control and would afford her the right to make whatever arrangements for defense might be deemed necessary.

Surely adequate provision will be made in the final peace settlement for the realization of these reasonable and just aspirations of the gallant Belgian people.

THE ARMISTICE

While Webster defines the word armistice as "a brief suspension of hostilities by agreement," all the world knows that the term is at present being used merely as a camouflage for "unconditional surrender," since Germany, in carrying out the terms of the agreement by disarming her entire military force, surrendering all of her submarines, the greater part of her artillery, navy, transportation facilities, and border strongholds, and also an enormous portion of her territory, makes herself absolutely impotent for any further resistance against the carrying out of whatever peace conditions the allies may care to impose.

PETITION TO ABANDON STREET

WHEREAS a petition has been filed with this body asking that the West 20 feet of Railroad Avenue, as said Railroad Avenue appears on that certain map entitled "North Fair Oaks, Subdivision No. 2," filed in the office of the County Recorder of San Mateo County, on the 8th day of September, 1908, and recorded in map book No. 6 at page 34, be abandoned as a public highway or street for the entire distance that Lot "A" shown upon the aforesaid map fronts upon said Railroad Avenue.

THEREFORE, be it resolved, that the hearing of said petition be and the same is hereby fixed for 10 o'clock A. M., Monday, December 23rd, 1918 at the Supervisors room at the Court House, Redwood City, San Mateo County, California, and that notice of said time and place of hearing be given to all freeholders in said Road District by publishing a notice thereof in Times-Gazette, a newspaper published in said San Mateo County for at least two successive weeks prior to the date fixed for said hearing and by posting conspicuously along the line of the proposed vacation, a similar notice.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Clerk of this Board attend to the giving of the foregoing notice.

CALIFORNIA AND CALIFORNIANS

BY GENERAL JOHN F. SHEEHAN

Junipero Serra.

Junipero Serra is justly entitled to be termed the "Father of California." His life was its early history. It was he who urged the exploration of our own California; it was he who planted the seeds of civilization as well as the seeds of Christianity here. Junipero Serra sought not wealth, neither pearls nor gold, but all his motives and actions tended to the glory of God. With him was the beginning of California (for hereafter in this volume the designation Alta California will be eliminated.) Father Serra possessed the spirit of the pioneer. A saint by nature, yet wordly enough to meet in aggressiveness and commanding spirit the rapaciousness of Mexican politicians and win his contentions against all odds. That painstaking historian Theo. H. Hittell speaks of him: "Pure in motive, strong in character and great in action." (Suaviter in mode, fortited in re)—"exceedingly devout, of fervid zeal, great command of language, of sonorous voice—always produced in effect." Father Serra was in a sense worldly, else he would have been sainted like his beloved Francis of Assisi; yet he was not worldly for himself, only for others, and worldly only for what might be accomplished for the Glory of God.

Miguel Jose Serra (for by that name he was christened) was born of lowly parents in the village of Petra, island of Majorca, located in the Mediterranean Sea, 105 miles off the coast of Spain, on November 24, 1749, at the age of 36, Junipero sailed of Spain since the 13th century. At the age of 16 he went to Palma, the capital city of the island, to perfect his education, and at 17 was inducted into the Order of Franciscans. It was at this period that he took the name of Junipero (Hoo-nee-pero) after a disciple of Saint Francis, who was noted for self-denial and in his assistance of and labors for the poor. In time Serra became an evangelist of the Franciscan Order, and was pulpit orator of repute. But his bent was towards the conversion of the heathen who knew not God, and the rugged path of the missionary he chose. The thoughts and eyes of Europe were upon the West then, as they have been ever since, and in 1749, at the age of 36, Junipero sailed from Cadiz, Spain, for the new country which Columbus and Cortez opened to the world. He was accompanied by the devoted companion of his youth, Father Palou, and Fathers Crespi, Verges and Vincens, some of whom were destined to be his companions for many years in the career they had so joyously chosen.

Ninety-nine days were occupied in reaching Vera Cruz.

The journey to Mexico City was made on foot, covering a distance of nearly 300 miles, and on the way Father Serra suffered so much from the attacks of poisonous insects that he bore to his dying day and ulcer on his leg which tortured him on every one of his numerous trips. On January 1, 1750, he registered at the College of San Fernando, Mexico City, which then and for generations thereafter held formidable sway, religious and political, over New Spain, and which 18 years thereafter conferred upon Father Junipero Serra the Presidency o fthe California Missions. In the meantime he was not idle, for he labored with incessant vigor among the Indians of the Sierra Gorda, a wild country, some distance north of the capital. The faithful Father Palou was his assistant at the Mission established in the Sierras, and the two companions taught and worked there for nine years.

But Serra's great life work was before him, and when in 1768, at the age of 55, he received the appointment of President of the California Missions, he at once joyfully accepted it and proceeded with the utmost zealousness in outlining his career for the civilization of the Californias, which occupied the remainder of his life. Father Serra and his sixteen Franciscan Missionaries started from Tepic, Mexico, across the Gulf of California, and arrived at Loreto on Good Friday, April 1, 1768. Being advised that Galvez was at La Paz, the undaunted Franciscan started on foot to confer with the special representative of Charles III, King of Spain, and traveled about 230 miles to the cosy spot on the Gulf. It was here that the subject of the exploration and establishment of Missions in the lands reposed by Cabrillo and Viscaino were discussed and determined upon. San Diego and Monterey were decided upon for Missions, but when Father Serra said: "What about a Mission in honor of our beloved Saint Francis?" Galvez answered: "Find the spot and he shall have a Mission." In something more than a year thereafter the spot was found—the great harbor of San Francisco—as noted in the chapter on Portola—and when the latter reported to Serra on his return to San Diego after the discovery of the bay, the resouceful missionary exclaimed: "There is our harbor; there is the place for the Mission of Saint Francis"—our own San Francisco.

The outfitting of the expeditions by land and sea to find San Diego and Monterey are detailed in the previous chapter on Portola, and we have only to relate that Father Serra left his friend Palou in charge of the Lower California Missions which were turned over to the Franciscans by the Jesuits; and the President trudged his weary way over a rocky, sandy, waterless, treeless and altogether barren country, hundreds of miles to a land destined to literally flow with milk and honey—the land of gold. Nature had provided for our California what the lower country lacked—and even the natives were of a higher and more tractable class. Father Serra followed Portola's party, accompanied by two soldiers and one servant, visited the Missions which lay on his path on the way north, and finally, on May 13th overtook Portola and rested at a station called Vellicata. Here he established a Mission, the first in Lower California to be dedicated by the Franciscans. On July 1, 1769, all parties united at San Diego.

While Portola with his party were in search of Monterey, Father Serra remained in San Diego and proceeded at once to establish a Mission at the bay where Cabrillo and Viscaino landed—the first Mission in our State of California. He was assisted by Padres Viscaino and Parron, the location being on what is now known as Old San Diego. In August the Indians became troublesome and their arrogance and thievish propensities soon led to bloodshed. The Mission party consisted only of the three padres, four soldiers, a blacksmith, a carpenter and a few Indian novitiates who came with the expedition from Lower California. There were as yet no converts from among the San Diego natives, and had the attacking party been armed with other than clubs and rocks the Mission party might have been destroyed. As it was, one servant was killed, while three of the attacking Indians lost their lives. The valiant defense and the firearms used brought the respect of the hostiles and peace was restored—but converts came slowly.

Governor Portola returned from his visit north in January 1770, and the disappointment in his failure to find Monterey was great. But Junipero Serra's determination overcame all opposition, and on the providential arrival of the ship San Antonio preparations for the second expedition up the coast were begun. It was decided to leave in San Diego Parron and Gomez, Sergeant Ortega, eight soldiers, and twelve neophyte Indians, besides Commander Vila and the crew of the San Carlos. Captain Moncada, Parde Viscaino and twenty soldiers with a retinue of attendants were sent back to Vellicata to bring up cattel, sheep, etc. Father Serra sailed for Monterey on the San Antonio on April 16th, and Portola and party started for the same destination by land on the following day. The latter part of May both land and sea parties met at the cove of Monterey, where in 1602 Viscaino and his party camped and celebrated mass. Needless to say the occasion was a joyful one, for here were assembled representatives of the King of Spain and the church—the military and the ecclesiastics—and on June 3, 1770, the Royal Presidio of Monterey and the Mission of San Carlos Barromeo were jointly established, and thereafter until the State was admitted into the Union of the United States of America Monterey was generally recognized as the capital of California. As a future chapter will be devoted to the Missions in detail, we will in this merely follow the personal career of Junipero Serra. A messenger was at once dispatched to Mexico to herald to Viceroy Croix and General Galvez the important tidings of the settlement of San Diego and Monterey, which produced great rejoicing in New and Old Spain. California was on the map of the world.

Father was tireless in his devotion to his God and his people. Soon he became convinced that it would be better for all to separate the Missions from the Presidios, the soldiers from the neophytes, so he wandered over the wooded hills of Monterey to find a more suitable site for the Mission. He found the desired spot near the mouth of a pretty stream, flowing through a narrow valley and emptying into a small, fairly protected bay. This was about seven miles from the Mission of Monterey. No biographies of Serra or historian of the Missions has explained why he named valley and stream Carmel. It may have been from the Spanish word Carmel, meaning cresses or flowers, and which were found in abundance in the narrow valley. The author is indebted to Mrs. Nellie Van da Graf Sanchez, author of a charming volume entitled: "Spanish and Indian Place Names of California." Mrs. Sanchez writes: "The word Carmel is not Spanish, but Hebrew, —Kar-mel,—and its meaning is said to be garden or garden land. The name in California was first given to the Carmel river, not by Junipero Serra, but by Viscaino, in 1602, and was probably given in reference to the famous Mount Karmel in Palestine, which was the site of the first foundation of the Order of Camelite monks. As the word is not of Spanish origin it was not included in my book, but perhaps it would have been as well to include it, as it is so prominent in the history of the State. I have not been able to find any reference to Viscaino's exact reasons for applying this name to the river, but it may have been because he discovered it on some date important in the history of the Carmelite Order."

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM JOHN P. SULLEN

John P. Cullen a member of the famous 91st division that trained at Camp Lewis, and which took so prominent a part in fighting at the Argone and the Meuse, writes to his grandmother, Mrs. M. McNally at Menlo Park as follows:

Somewhere in France, October 15, 1918—My Dear Grandmother: The fight was fine. Have just returned to a nice, quiet little French village, so I can write you a word of it now, but pardon this long space between my last note and this one; as we've been terribly long in getting resettled. We've returned feeling great. I haven't received a scratch from the fray.

The night before, we assembled in some real dugouts (fitted up like a modern house, even electric lights and real wood floors and walls. Then it was a still, quiet wait. Our heavy barrage soon opened up just over our heads—and, well, anxiety was raving. Our next move was through some of the crookedest trenches you have ever heard of and then the jumbled masses of entangled barbed wire—gee, but they were a fright to get over in that heavy fog and all that noise and the zyss—booms and bangs around us. Then came the real "No Man's Land." We could hardly realize that we were really there. It seemed as though some of the fire works would soon let up—but no, it just kept ringing. After some trampling through the brush we rambled across a few hills and then day break came. Well it was just rabbit hunting then—only instead of having our game running from us they would drop and hide and try to get us instead. You'd know it was a game, if you could picture us sneaking through the brush and pits with an eargerness of "Get your game at first sight," or you're gone. I'll bet there's no more rabbits in dear old California that'll beat us when we go on our own shooting trips again. We've got an eye that's really trained and a sneaking crawl that can't be detected. It just comes naturally too—just watch your pal drop alongside of you and—well you'll forget danger and just have to try and get even. After the brush hunting came some clear rolling hills and to be sure there were machine guns and snipers hid throughout. This was the interesting part. Now the shooting was all with the rear guard. They wouldn't attempt to fight face to face. It's all "comrade" with them, and when in the open, its just run. The artillery has to step in and help them then, and that's what hurts. The little bullets are easy, but those big ones throw quite a lot of shrapnel and no one knows when a piece is coming your way.

Some real fun is taking a town. Everything is left in their hasty retreat so we have some interesting moments exploring. Sampling.

To be sure, the prisoners test things first, then we enjoy what we can. Oftentimes their places and dugouts are fixed up as though they rally owned the country. Vegetable gardens galore, rabbits, cows and calves. But we don't stop long. The moppers-up—I'll write you of this later.

The nights were rather cold at times but the bigger shells would get us warm so our time would roll on fairly fast.

Night patrol work and out-post duty was good too. After our relief we marched quite a distance and now we're enjoying a real rest in a nice, quiet French town.

Eleven of us just had furloughs and were going to Southern France, but word just came in to move and cancel furloughs. Will continue this at my first convenience. Hoping you are as well as I am and that every things is O. K., I remain,

Your grandson,
JOHN P. CULLEN.

Don't Be Tricked Into Using Alum Baking Powder

If demonstrators try to get you to use inferior baking powders by false tests and statements, carefully read the label and see if the powders contain alum.

And remember that alum is derived from mineral sources, and declared by many medical authorities unsafe to use in food.

To insure healthful, appetizing food of finer texture and flavor, prudent housekeepers always use

ROYAL
BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

Its superiority in all the qualities that make the perfect baking powder is never questioned.

Contains No Alum Leaves No Bitter Taste
